Dear Demites,

Some of you may be wondering why I am writing this instead of saying it — well, the truth of the matter is — I doubt that I could get through what I have to say without my voice cracking or shedding a tear. To some of you that may sound corny but to others, those who hold Dem dear to their hearts, you'll know how I feel. This is my last Christmas in Dem and the reason I present this gift from me to you, is that I'd like to leave something behind. I've spent four wonderful years in this place which we call a hall and shall always have a soft spot in my heart for her. I can honestly say that it's the best home away from home that a girl could possibly have. But a building isn't a hall or a home without the people in it, and you are the ones who have made my stay here memorable.

I wish each and everyone of you a very Merry Christmas and sincerely hope that Dem has many more Christmases to look forward to. And when I new Christmas rolls around, give a moment's thought to an old Demite who hated to say good-bye.

Dem love,

CJ

Blood donations at Eastern last week fell 17 pints short of the quota as collections amounted to 883 pints, a tally which would nevertheless keep Halloween vampires' blood bank accounts solvent. Contributions from nearby Oakland eased the drive over the thousand mark to 1,008 pints. On campus, fraternities, sororities and residence halls were saluted for their efforts in aiding the Red Cross program. First place trophies went to Sigma Tau Gamma (fraternity), Alpha Gamma Delta (sorority), Taylor South (men's dorms) and Pemberton Hall (women's dorms).

Pem was controversial

Pem still stands

Pem Hall stands as a symbol of Livingston Lord's (Eastern's first president) perseverance. Because of tight budgets, Lord's proposal for a women's dorm was twice refused until he solicited the help of Senator Stanton Pemberton; hence the name, Pemberton Hall. The years have changed its exterior, but the young women inside are still relatively the same—just see what happens to the girls of the third floor when a male voice comes drifting up from the bushes below.

by Rose Ann Robertson

If someone were to ask you about Pemberton Hall, what would you tell them? You could tell them about the famous fourth floor, or about the man-hungry "Pem Prudes" or about the mysterious stranger that stalked the residents of the Pit. But this isn't the real Pem Hall.

The oldest dorm in Illinois, Pem was from the beginning a controversial issue in the state. No other state college or university had a residence hall.

LIVINGSTON C. Lord, Eastern's first president, was a staunch supporter of women's dormitory. Mr. Lord felt it would create a respectable social life on the campus.

Because of a tight budget, Mr. Lord was refused twice on his proposal, but on the third try in 1907, he engaged the help of his friend, Senator Stanton Pemberton of Oakland. With his help, the dormitory was approved.

Because of this, the oldest women's residence hall in Illinois bears the name Pemberton.

PRESIDENT Lord's perseverance in the battle for a dormitory paid off when Pem Hall maidens and their college center-type dorm roused the drowsy social life of the campus.

The activities of the Pemities were described each week in the "Page Pandora" Also, the beginnings of student government were begun within the ivied walls of Pem in 1917.

"Hours" at Pem were strict. Coeds were to be in the hall at 7:30 p.m. school nights and were allowed 10 p.m. curfew on Fridays and Saturdays, at which time men could be entertained in the parlor.

RESIDENTS were allowed to attend church without chaperones, but were required to have escorts for picnics, dances and theatre trips. There were no self-disciplining councils the first years. Any misbehaving coed was dealt with personally by Mary Hawkins, hall director, or by President Lord.

There was plenty of misbehaving possible. On not a few occasions, coeds slipped down sheet ropes to go for coffee or to serenade off-campus men. Green freshmen were taken for "rides" in the country by upper-classmen.

Late-hour window conversations with men calling up from the bushes below provided constant thrills for an entire floor.

SINCE THE crackerbox gym was built adhered to the south wing of the dorm (what is now the textbook library) student athletes came and went regularly, to the delight of the residents, who peeped out the windows from the second floor window seat.

Down through the years, Pem has become a tradition at Eastern. The girls who live there feel they are a part of history Pem has made and is making.

Many find Pem different from any other dorm on campus. Visitors at once feel the friendly attitude that prevails in the hall. It has a feeling of being "home" and still has all the advantages of dorm life.

PEMITES are very active, not only in dorm affairs, but also in many campus activities. This year, Pem won second place in the house dec and their place in float for the Homecoming activities.

Homecoming for Pem is a gala affair. How many other dorms can boast of Homecoming residents who were among the first alumnae of Eastern? It's always a thrill to see a little gray-haired lady come to your room and say, "That was my room when I was here in 1925."

Just walk into Pem sometime and take the time to look at all the unique features; the fireplaces, the baby grand piano, the four Sargent paintings, the beautiful green-velvet chairs and the private (?) sun-bathing roof.

ONE SPRINGFIELD newspaper wrote of Pemberton Hall in its early days; "It's a hall—one of those halls you read of in those delightful old English novels. Though, of course, it isn't an old hall now, it hopes to be someday and to have ivy clinging to its moss-covered walls . . . and great, wide-spreading trees surround it."

It's an old hall now, complete with ivy and large trees and a tradition that won't die, because the women of Pem Hall won't let it die.

Riot proves successful

by Barb Barry

It was a dark and stormy night. Suddenly, an ominous message appeared:

RIOT TONIGHT
(spontaneous)

Meet at 10:30 in Pem's lounge

A good time will be had by all!

What did these mysterious rioters do? Did they protest cafeteria food? Did they perhaps burn their student ID's? Oh no, it was an offense far worse than these—they organized a "jock raid," the first of the year.

TO RETALIATE to a panty raid made last week, and because somehow the coeds had acquired the name of "Pem Hall Prudes," they were determined to show what really lurks beneath those murky exteriors.

About thirty to thirty-five coeds organized between 10:30 p.m. and 11 p.m. and set out in spite of terrible weather

They tried, but the men of Thomas Hall stood in their way. When the Pemites tried to stage a jock raid, the men turned the tables and drug the raiders through mud and campus pond before escorting them back to their dorm.

Swim ends jock raid

conditions.

Armed with umbrellas, rainhats, and raincoats, they waded with their bare feet through acres of slimy mud, chilling, drenching rain, and over sharp rocks in pursuit of that "impossible dream." Nothing could stop those dauntless women from their course of action.

THE FIRST area of attack was Taylor's south side, where the chant arose, "we want jocks, J-O-C-K-S! JOCKS!" The Taylor men can be counted on for action every time.

After the coeds had moved to the other side, the men decided they wanted vengeance! Guys came running out of Taylor grabbing the nearest coeds and carrying them into the building, where they were squirted with catsup.

The next stop was Thomas, and frankly, it wasn't worth it. The men at Thomas just sat around, so the women left for greener pastures.

THE MEN of Taylor South again pulled a sneak ambush, and carried off three unsuspecting victims, but they were released when all thirty coeds threatened to attack them.

Stevenson was next on the list, but before the coeds even made it, several cars stopped to inquire about phone numbers, and, of course, all requests were refused.

Once at Stevenson, the reception was poor, in fact it was rotten. The guys threw cans, apples, oranges, and sawdust at those poor innocent coeds, so, of course, they left fast.

NOT satisfied with the loot

they had obtained so far, the coeds made the fatal mistake of returning to Taylor. The men were waiting and when the women came back, it was hand-to-hand combat!

About five coeds were carried off and thrown in the lake, and the others were dragged through mud puddles and carried about.

AFTER a long skirmish, the guys decided to be peaceable, and thinking the women needed an escort back to Pem, they gallantly volunteered.

So, they returned, wet, covered with mud, tired and bedraggled, but thoroughly happy. Was it worth it? You'd better believe it!

Bicycles increase on campus

by Bronwyn Rains

Have you noticed? There's an increase of bicycles on campus this year. Not only the students are riding them, but also administrators and professors.

Bill Quick, registration department, rides one and enjoys it.

ACCORDING to him, it is quicker than walking, and easier to ride up to the door of a building than to take the car and find a parking spot. He doesn't feel ridiculous and thinks that the exercise is great.

Many students are also riding bikes. Notice how soon they get to class and how often they aren't late!

They ride them mainly for the convenience, but when the weather starts to get colder, they will have to revert to walking.

BEFORE bicycle season is completely over, and before the snow flies, three coeds decided to take a small journey. They are Pat Ryan, Gini Boyd and Marilyn Johnson, all from Pemberton Hall.

While others on campus were making their Halloween costumes, Pat, Gini and Marilyn got up for no apparant reason, decided to ride bikes to Mattoon.

Thinking it would be fun and, of course, great exercise, they set out on their venture at 8:30 a.m. Deciding not to take the highway, they took 316.

FINALLY getting to Mattoon, they found out they still had a distance to ride to get to the business section. Upon arriving downtown, Pat and Gini went shopping and while in the stores, hitched the bikes to lamp posts.

After the coeds had romped around Mattoon for sometime, dusk began to set in so they decided to start back to Charleston.

Coming back, they got lost and for awhile ended up in a cornfield. Taking 45 minutes to cross the field and find their way again, they found themselves at some railroad tracks. Tramping over the ditches, they finally got back on the road.

GOING past the cemetery was the worst part. Being Halloween made the imaginary spooks come out for the coeds.

When Pat heard a dog bark behind her, she rode her bike into the ditch.

Starting again for home, they finally arrived here about 7 p.m.

Asked if there would be a next time, Pat said, "only if they remember to bring scarves and gloves."

MARILYN could only say "not on Halloween. It was so spooky and dark!"

Pemites get BRAVE!

Pemberton Hall has been reopened to allow organizations to hold sales, but the hall's council has stated that these sales must be held in the main lobby next to the stairway.

Halloween is welcomed in by Mary Byrne

Pemites Mary Byrne and Debbie Muehlhausen observe Halloween and "do their thing" with frizzled hair and a werewolf mask. Some Pemberton Hall guests may have left early that night when greeting Mary Byrne at the receptionist desk!

'Wenchette of the Week'

by Bronwyn Rains

"Wenchette of the Week"—a pageant presented by the women of Pemberton Hall's "Third New" corridor.

Cheering—the all-girl type that coeds let out when no guys are around.

HILARITY—the half-shocked, half-riotous sort epitomized by "oh-my-lord, they're not going to say that in front of everybody" statements.

"May I have the envelope, please, Miss (Debbie) Taliani?"

Third New was playing to a capacity crowd, a clique-oriented women's dorm that fills the classic dining hall every night by 5:20.

CURIOSITY on edge—a room full of coeds sitting in front of plates of the dorm's well-done roast beef and creamed cabbage.

Finally, the long-awaited announcement—the first "Wenchette of the Week" is... Miss Debbie Green of 214 Pem.

Chaos. INSTANTANEOUS uproar resounds.

Screaming, laughing, clapping.

Miss Green, the winner of Third New's gag award covered her face with her hands, as expected, while everyone melted with mirth.

Miss Diane Ross, the Burt Parks of Third New, led the "We love you, Debbie" salutation.

What is the meaning of all this tomfoolery?

THIRD New has presented a new concept in residence hall living to promote spirit. No ulterior motives were planned, and none were made.

The gag contest was an intended farce. Rules, regulations and entry blanks were made.

Qualifications included performing a mean and nasty trick on a fellow Pemite, submitting a photo of herself in underwear, jilting one fiance or several guys and approval by head wench Debbie Taliani.

JUDGES were Yvonne Galleger, Vicky Moan, Bronwyn Rains and Pat Castles. They were not restricted to choosing only those who submitted entries, so every Pemite was eligible.

Miss Doris Dunkirk, Pem Hall director, was at the pageant, and could only say, "I've never witnessed a contest quite like it."

The Wenchette contest disproves one long-standing concept about Pemberton Hall's traditional name of "Menopause Manor" and its inhabitants as "Pemberton Prudes."

ASKED HOW it felt to be the first "Wenchette of the Week," Miss Green said, "It's fantastic. I've never had such an honor before."

Dear women of Pemberton Hall,
 I would like to take this opportunity to thank all of you for giving me the chance to represent Pemberton Hall in the Miss Delta Chi Pageant. It really meant a lot to me. Thanks again so very much.

Sincerely,
 Robin Loring
